

Abstract of the Disclosure

A Raman probe that can be used with high-intensity excitation light without producing light that interferes with the measurement of Raman scattering. A receiving-end filter is doughnut-shaped, with an exciting-end filter disposed at the center thereof. A light-blocking structure is provided between the exciting-end filter and the receiving-end filter such that the excitation end and the receiving end are completely separated.